Georgetown, South Carolina...a great place to live and work!

If someone had told me 30 years ago that I would be living in Georgetown, SC, I would have told them they were nuts. But I couldn't be happier living in a small town where people are genuine in their friendship and who are so very proud of their town. My husband and I have moved many times, but never have we felt such an instant connection to a town's heartbeat and soul. There's something very special about little Georgetown, and we are excited to see the growth of businesses that will provide even more people with that source of pride and commitment. ### VOLUNTEER HIGHLIGHT: Nancy Lowe

Nancy grew up in Georgetown in a large family. Summers were spent at the beach, sailing her father's Sunfish and working at the Tip Top Inn. She graduated from East Carolina University with a degree in Art Education. She has worked as a graphic designer, was the director of Kids Voting in Georgetown, and most recently as an art teacher at Kensington Elementary. Nancy is married to Dave Lowe, a former instructor at the Sailing School. She has three children and two grandchildren. She is enjoying retirement by volunteering, painting bird portraits, and spending time with her family. Nancy is one of our newer volunteers at the SCMM, and we are fortunate to have her on our team.

Maritime Moment

By Justin McIntyre: SCMM Historian and Curator

Having departed New York on November 27, 1866, for Brazos Santiago (southern Texas near Mexican border), the steamship Suwanee, overloaded with military surplus for the Mexican government, foundered in stormy seas off the South Carolina coast on December 4. Suwanee carried everything from cannons and rifles, to swords and various other forms of equipment. A number of artifacts recovered from the wreck of Suwanee have been graciously donated by Pete Manchee.
